We now know through evidence based design that art has healing properties and augments the hospital and clinic setting. Evidence based design is using design concepts, proven through scientific studies, to improve healing. In recent years, healthcare designers have employed what works best for the patient population and those support people involved. Soothing and healing art is both a subjective choice and for Facey, a common interior decision.

Art expert, Liese Pfeifer, from Integrated Art Group, is working with Facey Medical Group Clinic to develop a creative, engaging collection that includes local artists with the goal of reflecting the values of Facey Medical Group Clinic. The art service will also augment the LEED Certified goal of using sustainable materials and practices. The finished collection of art will offer the community a diverse and rich reflection of the creativity that abounds in this region.
